Credit Fixer GuideThe first step in getting control of your credit is to request your history from the reporting agencies. No worries, this is a free entitlement, follow our Free Credit Report Guide for this step. Our credit repairing specialist will ask for these credit history documents in order to better understand the incidents on your report. They will give you a fee based on the number of incidents and the estimated degree of difficulty. You may be surprised to hear what they say. For instance, even if you are inclined to question the legitimacy of an incident in your history, you might just go ahead and settle the payment to make it go away. However, sometimes it makes better sense to dispute a past incident than to simply pay it. By paying an alleged past debt, the incident appears again in your history- recent history. This re-appearance may have a negative affect on your beacon score. In this case, trust the pro's. These guys work with the agencies everyday all day and know the in's and out's better than anyone.
